Manifold is grant-funded, not-for-profit, and 100% open source.

Manifold is the result of a three-year long collaboration between two public universities and a digital development agency staffed with humanities scholars. Manifold is designed to provide a solid, robust publishing platform that is easy to install and use. And because it's open source you can modify and adapt Manifold to your specifications, or develop additional features to meet your unique needs. Manifold is funded by a grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation.

Library Board

Institutions and individuals who are members of the OLH Library Partnership Subsidy (LPS) scheme are entitled to membership of the OLH Library Board.

The OLH Library Board (LB), in conjunction with the Academic Advisory Board and the OLH Directors (CEOs), determine the right of admission for journals to the OLH platform. This, in turn, means that these three entities collectively determine any year-on-year budget increases. The boards, except in exceptional circumstances, discuss these matters and vote through online channels.
